MORE CONFUSION

(the insipid laws we have to abide)

Fri., May 30, not Mon., May 26, will be Memorial Day this year for Federal Agencies, the Fed. Exec. Board said at Boston yesterday.

William F. Connors, FEB Chm., explained that in 1971 Fed. agencies will join with State and City Gov'ts observing most holidays on the Monday prior to the actual day.

It will be business as usual for all Fed. employees as the State and City employees celeb. Memorial Day on May 26. Fed. agencies will generally close down on Fri., May 30. Hospitals and certain functions of protective agencies will continue to give service.

ALA Free Holiday Help

BOSTON-The ALA as a public service, will put 2 of its service vehicles on portions of Route 128 and Hwy. 3 to Cape Cod to assist disabled motorists over the coming Memorial Day weekend in Mass.

The service, according to an ALA spokesman, is designed to alleviate congestion on these major arteries during the heavy traffic periods by helping start stalled cars or by removing them to repair facilities.

The trucks, carrying trained mechanics, will also provide gasoline and water for stalled cars. The service will be free and is being underwritten by the ALA in the interest of the motoring public," said James F. Delaney, ALA's manager of service operations.

"Arrangements have been made with a Boston radio station (WHDH) for its skyway patrol to radio the positions of stalled cars to us. We, in turn, will radio to our trucks to drive to various locations," Delaney said.

The service would operate on Sat. and Mon. of the 3 day Memorial Day weekend, which is May 24-26 in Mass. this year.

THE ULTIMATE - NO SHELL

NEEDED - Better regulation of Pesticides & Integrated methods of Control from the Conservation Foundation, Washington D.C.

Scientific examination has shown that DDT residues cause a hormone induction in eagles and other birds which upsets calcium metabolism and produces egg shells too thin to protect embryos. Now, according to Alexander Sprunt IV, research director of the National Audubon Society, "the ultimate has been reached -- no shell at all."

On April 13, Sprunt said, Audubon researchers found an eagle nest on the shores of Lake Superior in northern Michigan which contained the "ultimate" -- no shell, just a membrane. The egg was apparently laid with only the membrane covering and, of course, did not survive. The discovery was made by Milwaukee ornithologist Daniel D. Berger and University of Wisconsin graduate student S. Postupalsky during research sponsored by the National Audubon Society.

Sprunt disclosed this latest finding from Audubon's eight-year study of eagles at the society's annual meeting in St. Louis in late April. He said that "unless we ban DDT, the American eagle will become extinct." He also pointed out that "hard" pesticides such as DDT have caused similar eggshell problems in other species and have eliminated the peregrine falcon as a breeding bird in the eastern United States.

A Letter to Young Drivers

Dear Young Driver:

If you plan to drive after attending a H.S. prom or party, I think it only fair to remind you to keep certain matters in mind.

If you have a learner's permit and you are under 18, you are not entitled to drive between the hours of 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. unless you are accompanied by a parent or legal guardian with a valid license which has been in effect for at least one year.

If you have a license and are under 18, you are not entitled to drive between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. unless you are accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

If you have a learner's permit and are over 18, you may not drive unless you are accompanied by an operator over 21 who has a valid license for over one year and that person must sit next to you.

If you are under 21 and you drive a motor vehicle unaccompanied by a parent or legal guardian and knowingly transport or carry on your person any alcoholic beverage, you shall be punished by law by a fine of not more than $50. If the court reports you for a conviction of this violation while driving on a public way or way where the public had a right of access, the registrar may suspend your license for not more than 3 months. A police officer may arrest you without a warrant for a violation of this law.

Conviction of operating under the influence of alcohol or narcotics is punishable by a revocation of your license for a period of at least one year!

I think you understand what I'm trying to tell you. No one wants to kill the joy of this momentous event in your life. But, neither do we want to have you kill yourself or someone else!

We know that your learner's permit or license to drive is one of your most valued possessions and we hope you'll "do your thing" by accepting the full responsibilities which accompany it.

Sincerely,
RICHARD E. McLAUGHLIN
Registrar of Motor Vehicles

Mass. Audubon Society

Environmental education is becoming the great unifying factor that is pulling together the loose threads of traditional split-up education.

Gradually people are realizing that to accomplish anything in science, you have to write up the results of your experiments so people will understand them...to appreciate literature you must know about people and human psychology...to get anything done in the social sciences, you have to have the facts from natural science. Life is made up of complexities, and school should teach children how to make sense out of the interrelated parts of the total picture. What good are the parts of the jigsaw puzzle if no one fits them together to make sense?

Ecology is the science of interrelated life, and conservation is the social art of making the world make ecological sense on a human level. So conservation education is becoming a link between the compartmentalized traditional disciplines. Kids are learning in school what problems affect the environment and how to solve these problems...and the concern which cares enough about the environment to want to make it better.

Of course you don't start in at this level in kindergarten. You begin with teaching an appreciation of nature and an ability to observe nature. And you teach how people and nature are interrelated. You teach how people depend on nature for water, air, food and health. As the child grows, you gradually expand his horizons so that from thinking about flowers in the school ground he is thinking about town and regional and national and world environmental problems. And you teach the city child about nature, and you teach the rural child about the city. You teach the interrelation between city and suburb and farmland and wild land. Then the children are prepared for the complexities which will form their high school environmental education.

The expanded conservation programs of the Mass. Audubon Soc. are making a big step in the direction of bringing this sort of creative environmental awareness to all the children of Mass. The Audubon conservation program is aimed not just at teaching the children about the birds (though that is one aspect of the total problem), but most of all at making the children aware of their surroundings, both natural and man-made.

Part of the Society's long-range plan is to emphasize bringing conservation ed. to city children, who will be the majority of voters of the future. Children in the country may grow up with a certain natural awareness of the importance of nature, but you have to teach it to city children. Why, some city kids seem to grow up thinking they don't breathe air or drink water...or at least they don't get the connection between keeping our natural resources in healthy condition and keeping our people in healthy condition.

Well, the Audubon is going to help change that if it can with its urban teaching programs for the inner-city schools. And our state will be better because of it.

NIH THE SEARCH FOR HEALTH

A REPORT FROM THE NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH
BETHESDA, MARYLAND

Danger—Watch Out

Everyone knows that many children get comfort out of thumbsucking, especially when they are apprehensive, bored, or tired. Wise parents respond to such physical signs because they know that the child usually cannot put his distress into words, and may not even understand what ails him.

There are other physical signs, fortunately much less common, which also clearly reveal distress. However, these danger signals are less well understood.

Studies at the National Institute of Dental Research, one of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland, have shown that sometimes children who have had an ordinary mouth infection with sore gums will continue to pick or scratch at the sore place on their gums and keep it from healing long after the original infection has passed. The child will use his fingernail to accomplish this either openly and habitually, or secretly, if he thinks his parents may object or interfere with this habit. Refractory lesions that have no recognizable cause should lead to a suspicion of self-mutilation. If this is the case, it is a waste of time to rely on medication for a cure or to search for some obscure non-existing allergy as the cause.

The dentist or physician should urge the parents of such children to search for an underlying emotional distress, and if necessary, to get professional psychological help.

The cases reported so far are few. Those most carefully studied have shown that the child is reacting to such family difficulties as the death of a parent, the arrival of another child, or some other serious family dislocation beyond the youngster's ability to handle.

Dentists often say that the mouth is a mirror which reflects bodily health or disease. It can also reflect the state of mental health.
